The Batman

2022-04-01 20:00:00

The darkness in "The Batman" is pervasive and literal. Gotham City in the week after Halloween, when this long chapter unfolds, sees about as much sunshine as northern Finland in mid-December. The ambience of urban demoralization extends to the light bulbs, which flicker weakly in the gloom. Bats, cats, penguins and other resident creatures are mostly nocturnal.

The Power of the Dog

A mesmerizing work from one of cinema's greatest directors, Jane Campion, The Power of the Dog is a film that you have likely heard a lot of praise about. I am here to tell you that not only does it deserve it and all the awards it has gotten, it is worth experiencing for itself as it defies all expectations.

The Unforgivable

What happens when you do something that's unforgivable? The aptly titled crime drama The Unforgivable, which is based on Sally Wainwright's British miniseries Unforgiven, follows Ruth Slater (Sandra Bullock) who, after serving two decades in jail for murdering a sheriff who tried to evict her and her little sister from their home, is ready to re-enter society and build a new life.

The Guilty

Hello, operator? A remake of the 2018 Danish film Den Skyldige, The Guilty focuses on Joe Baylor (Jake Gyllenhaal), a demoted police officer stuck fielding calls on the night shift of a 9-1-1 call center. When one particular call comes through from a kidnapped woman, Joe is forced to confront his checkered past, which is perhaps not as innocent as we're led to believe.

Rush

Once upon a time, the creator of The Crown teamed up with legendary director Ron Howard and two Marvel stars to make an exciting, racing drama – and nobody saw it. 2013's Rush is a criminally underrated film, and it features one of Chris Hemsworth's best dramatic performances as daring Formula One driver James Hunt.
